Study Group Problem

Problem Statement:

- Creating a way for students to be able to quickly and efficiently create study group sessions all from a single app. With each instance being class based. As there is often a hurdle for some students in getting involved with a study group.

Who is experiencing the problem?

- Students who want to get together with classmates to form study groups to accomplish greater academic performance in classes, but struggle with organizing or joining the study group sessions.

What is the problem?

- Currently, when creating a study group session, it is being done in a variety of ways. From pre-existing group chats to different online chatting platforms or just by email. This makes it hard for newcomers to join those groups as they are mostly pre-existing. As well as making it difficult to locate the groups in the first place.

Why does it matter?

- Creating study groups can significantly help students in regards with exams and homework, yet students waste time on logistics of creating the study group when it should be more streamlined. By having an app-based solution that can allow students to set a location, time and date all at once. Then announce it to the rest of the class they are in via a notification. This will eliminate the issue of logistics allowing students to form groups more efficiently and ease.
